

Regional CEDS Report

The Rockingham Economic Development Corporation releases a Comprehensive Economic Development Strategy each year. Its purpose is to develop a document that can be used to aid in the development of the region and help town and city government's by providing data on important factors throughout Rockingham County.

The first step in creating the CEDS report is to form a steering committee. The REDC uses the previous years committee as a starting point and tries to reach out to major interest groups and under represented areas to create a diverse and accurate representation of the county. Meeting are held in different towns and cities to further facilitate the diversity and sense of representation on the committee.

Next, data of the existing economic conditions of the county need to be gathered and analyzed. This is done in partnership with the Rockingham Regional Planning Commission. The Nashua Regional Planning Commission and Economist Dennis Delay also provided support in 2011 and 2012. These groups compile information on the previous 12 months to be reviewed in each document.

Meetings are held where the data, current projects, and possible new projects are discussed. The document also lists projects that were completed throughout the course of the year. Each study is broken down into four major parts: Steering Committee, The Regional Economy, Development Strategies and Activates, and Evaluation.
